2.545 ... Warsaw may be said to have, in its vicinity, some of the finest drives and promenades in Europa for width and extend. The numerous avenues of the Ujazdow, leading to the grand-duke-Constantine's residence, Belvedere, planted with lofty lime and chestnut trees, are the rendezvous of nearly the entire population of Warsaw on Sunday and other holidays, and are admirably calculated, also for horse and sledge-races, both of which, I understand, take place on this spot, whenever the weather or season is favourable. The poles, on all those occasions, resemble the rest of the continental nations, who cannot enjoy the pleasure of a ride or a walk in the country, without thinking of their stomach, for which ample provision is made at the numerous restaurants of all classes and of degrees scattered in many parts of the avenues in question.

A short drive will convey stranger from Warsaw to a most delightful spot of the bank of the Vistula and the immediate vicinity of the Ujazdow, formerly the country residence of Stanislas Augustus... The situation of this Royal villa, in the midst of an extensive park of fine stately old trees, is delightful. The palace is built in the Italian style... The entrance into the grounds park of Łazienki... A stone bridge, on which is erected the equestrian statue of J. Sobieski, is approached by means of a gentle ascent in the road, and affords ingress to a succession of delightful...
